VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN IN LONDON

Police officer failed to help many 999 callers including rape victim

The Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) reviewing the behaviour of a police officer who was fired for mishandling 999 callers revealed that the officer failed to send help to a rape victim.

A woman who called 999 to report that her friend had been raped was told by the officer to take her to a local police station, which she did 90 minutes later. The correct response should have been to send a police car to the victim immediately.

In another incident a woman calls to report that she has been attacked by her husband when trying to take her child - rather than immediately sending a police car to the victim he told her to report the incident to her local police station. He was also rude and condescending to the woman, according to the report.

In another case, as revealed by the IPCC, a woman called to say she felt suicidal and wanted to be taken into secure psychiatric care. The officer mistook her for somebody he had spoken to earlier in the day and then told her to visit a police station.

From the recording it was clear that the woman was outside and was therefore at great risk. Similarly the appropriate response in this case should have been to send a police car to where the woman was.

The IPCC investigation found out that from the 3,000 emergency calls the officer from the Bow Central Command Centre in east London handled in a three-month period in 2009, 141 had "significant performance issues" and 19 amounted to gross misconduct.

Deborah Glass, IPCC commissioner for London, said he behaved in "an appalling and callous way" and was rightly sacked.

Three women sexually assaulted near tube station

Three women in their 20's were sexually assaulted in the past week allegedly by the same man near Finchley Central and West Finchley Tube stations in north London.

On all incidents the man covered their mouths during the assaults and he ran off on each occasion after the victims screamed and put up a struggle.

The first two assaults took place on 19 October, with the first at 18:15 and the second at 20:00. The third woman was attacked at 22:50 on 23 October.

Two of the victims were told to stay quiet and then touched in a sexual manner while he threatened to harm one woman.

Police have described the man as in his mid-30s and between 5ft 8in and 6ft tall. He is also slim and tanned. He wore blue jeans with formal-looking black shoes and smelled of cigarette smoke.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN IN THE UK

Teenage woman stabbed in the ear for not revealing her password

Jessica Herbert, 18, was 'tortured' repeatedly and stabbed in the ear with a pencil by Jason Flemming, 37, in a bid to get her Facebook password.

Swansea Crown Court heard that the first assault happened when Flemming stamping on the victim, causing bruising to her hip and legs. On another occasion he made her sit in freezing water until she 'admitted' having an affair.

Georgina Buckley, prosecuting, said the victim hoped that if she just said she had an affair then he would hit her and that would be the end of the matter.

However that didn't stop the abuse. Buckley added: "He stabbed her in the ear with a pencil because she refused to give him her Facebook password".

He then tied her feet and her hands behind her back, before putting a black bag over her head "until she couldn't breathe".

After being forced to reveal her Facebook login details, Flemming logged on to discover the victim has male friends.

"On exploring the account he discovered that she was friends with other men. He picked her up by the throat and she lost consciousness", the prosecution told the court.

Judge Keith Thomas, jailing Flemming said: "In an arrogant bullying fashion you dictated that you were in charge of her and she would do whatever you chose.

"You were obsessively jealous of her and took it out on her that she had male friends. You have an appalling record of abuse of women.

"On October 21 you had her in a cold bath, punching her and stabbing her in the ear with a pencil so she would provide you with a password for Facebook so you could see what she was up to.

"On October 22 you put a black bag over her head, you tied her hands and you picked her up by the throat. She has no memory of what happened she probably passed out." The judge also said that Flemming abuse was 'torture'.

Flemming who initially pleaded not guilty, admitted offences of common assault on three occasions between September 30 and October 21 last year.

He was jailed for 68 weeks.

Serial sex attacker has his sentence slashed

Scott Watson, 39, a serial sex attacker jailed for life has his minimum sentence reduced by an appeal judge.

Watson had already served a prison term for rape when he attacked and attempted to rape a 15-year-old girl in Arbroath, Angus in 2005.

The girl was walking along West Abbey Street, Arbroath when Watson punched her in the face and dragged her behind a caravan at a nearby car port.

He pushed her to the ground and when she tried to scream he placed an arm across her neck. He threatened to kill her and smeared her with soil hoping to destroy evidence.

He has already served five years of an eight year sentence imposed on him at the High Court in 1997 after raping a 28-year-old woman and sexually assaulting a 17-year-old girl when he attacked the 15-year-old in 2005.

Lord Mackay sentencing Watson in 2005 said: "Clearly you committed a sexual assault of the utmost gravity. The resistance your victim put up is remarkable and she is to be commended for the manner in which she sought to resist this serious attack on her."

Jailing him for life he also said it would be impossible for him to decide at the time at what stage it would be safe for Watson to be returned to the community.

He was ordered to serve at least seven and a half years of a life sentence for the Arbroath attack. However appeal judges at the Court of Criminal Appeal in Edinburgh have reduced the minimum sentencing to four and a half years.

Watson is now eligible to seek parole.

INTERNATIONAL VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN

Women not allowed to sit at the front of a New York bus

A Brooklyn, New York bus, run by Private Transportation Corporation since 1973, don't allow women to sit at the front, says reports.

Gitty Green, 30, who uses the bus B110 says because her religion dictates the separation of the sexes, she never wondered what it would be like to sit with men.

She said: "It's such a normal thing for us that women and men are separate. Most of the ladies go to the back."

Warnings posted in the front and the back of the bus, said that "when boarding a crowded bus with standing passengers in the front, women should board the back door after paying the driver in the front" and that "when the bus is crowded, passengers should stand in their designated areas."

Asaf Amitay, a 35-year-old regular rider on the bus said he did not believe that women should be seated in the front. He said women should sit at the back and men in the front.

Seth Solomonow, a spokesman for the Transportation Department, said the bus was supposed to be "available for public use" and could not discriminate since the contract was awarded through a public and competitive bidding process.

Anne Koenig, New York City's Department of Transportation director, asked the company that operates the B110 to respond to the claims. She said: "Please be advised that a practice of requiring women to ride in the back would constitute a direct violation of your franchise agreement and may lead to termination of that agreement."

Many women die in pretrial detention centres in Russia

Every year 50 to 60 women die in pretrial detention centres called SIZOs or "investigative isolation wards" in Moscow Russia, according to report from the Moscow Helsinki Group.

Natalya Gulevich, a businesswoman has been in detention in a SIZO for more than a year, with courts extending her detention at least six times - for failing to repay a bank loan.

Although she suffers from several chronic illnesses on the 24th of October a court in Moscow denied a request for her release. Earlier this month the European Court of Human Rights accepted an emergency appeal on her behalf.

Last April, Vera Trifonova a business woman awaiting trial on fraud charges, died of heart failure in a Moscow SIZO. Vladimir Zherebenkov, her lawyer said that she suffered from severe diabetes, had only one working kidney, and her lungs were filled with so much liquid that there was a danger she could drown in her sleep.

Defense lawyer Zherebenkov said: “Why hold people in barbaric conditions, when our prisons are already overflowing? And, to be blunt, they do not meet normal humane standards.”

Russia’s President Dmitry Medvedev ordered an investigation into the death of Trifonova and Sergei Pysin, the lead investigator in the case was charged with negligence. At least two other officials at the department that oversaw the case were also fired.

The President have also signed a law eliminating mandatory prison terms for many economic crimes and softened the rules for releasing suspects with health problems. However the practice still persists.

Do you experience anger/loss of self confidence every time you walk past mainstream advertising and you see innumerable images of the mythical ideal woman?

Do you wonder why you experience these feelings? Come along to this feminar and learn about the dynamics of how mainstream advertising is so effective at undermining your self-confidence and self-belief. Learn how the powerful advertising industry has co-opted feminism in order to exploit women by using feminist catch phrases such as 'because you're worth it!'. End Detention of victims of trafficking campaign

Stop detaining trafficked people - Victims of trafficking are victims of crime, not criminals.

Every day men, women and children are trafficked into and within the UK, experiencing slavery, rape, desperation and fear. Some vulnerable victims are identified and helped by Government and charities; however, due to a flawed system, an untold number are improperly detained in prisons and detention centres.

These individuals were lied to and harmed in the UK, but instead of focusing on arresting and prosecuting the criminals who trafficked and exploited them, many who also committed other crimes in our communities across the UK, the Government continues to put victims in prisons and detention centres.

Their crimes? Over 95% of Poppy Project clients in detention or prison lost their freedom because a trafficker gave them a fake passport; others stole food to survive – crimes that only happened because they were trafficked here. We call on the Government to ensure that anyone who may be a victim of trafficking is properly identified and freed from unfair detention or incarceration.

Review into the use of antidepressants – Sign the Petition

Platform 51 research shows that 33% of all women have taken antidepressants and more than half were not offered any alternative to drugs at the time of prescription. 24% currently taking antidepressants have been on them for 10 years or more and 24% have not had a review of their treatment for a year or more at some point. Antidepressants have a role to play in treating poor mental health but they are not the whole solution.

Fawcett Society - Day of action

Saturday 19th November!

On average, women earn less, own less, and are more likely to work and retire in poverty than men. The government's approach to cutting the deficit will widen the gap between women and men:

- Female unemployment is rising as jobs are cut in public service
- The benefits and services women rely on more are being slashed
- Women on low incomes are becoming poorer
- The pay gap looks set to widen
- Women's access to vital support services is being undermined
- Increasing numbers of women are being forced to give up work as cuts to childcare support means their jobs no longer cover the family's care costs

The government's approach to cutting the deficit is turning back time on women's equality. This can't go on.

On November 19th, join us on the 'DON'T turn back time' March in London 1950's THEME: DRESS UP! To send the message that women don't want to be catapulted back to the levels of inequality of yesteryear.

Survey for the voluntary sector: Big Society and Inequality

Voice4Change England and the Women's Resource Centre have been commissioned by the Office for Civil Society to provide advice to Government on: the challenges that inequalities present to the Big Society agenda and how to address them; and the opportunities for tackling inequalities that the Big Society agenda offers.

They are conducting a survey asking voluntary and community organisations focused on equality what the Big Society means for them and their beneficiaries.

The survey asks organisations how Big Society policies and programmes will affect the communities they work with; what the opportunities and challenges are; and what examples of good practice they would like to see more of.

The responses will be used to let Government know about voluntary and community organisations' experiences of the Big Society and to identify what steps can be taken to take advantage of opportunities, tackle challenges and to make sure that all communities benefit.

The survey should only take around 15 minutes to complete and respondents can answer only the most relevant questions.

www.twitter.com/EavesCharity

3 million women in the UK experience violence every year. Reforms to the legal aid scheme will leave many women without access to legal advice and representation and more reliant on statutory and voluntary agencies for support and information.

In-house training from Rights of Women offers a cost-effective way to ensure your staff have the knowledge and skills to support women. We have over 30 years' experience of providing training on women and the law, and our specialist team of solicitors and barristers will use their expertise and experience to make complex areas of the law clear, accessible and "user-friendly".

We will come and deliver training to you, at a time and venue of your choice, from just £42 per participant.

We can tailor our courses to meet your specific needs. Our "off the shelf" courses include:

Domestic violence and DIY injunctions: the complete guide
Getting the basics: an introduction to family law
Stop the traffic: protecting and supporting trafficked women in the UK
No recourse? EEA national? Supporting migrant women experiencing domestic violence

We consistently receive excellent feedback on our training courses:

"We have bought Rights of Women in-house training 3 times now and each time the feedback from staff has been excellent. The courses are perfect to ensure our domestic violence staff have up to date knowledge on the relevant legal practices. The trainers are professional, knowledgeable and friendly. Very impressed"
